‘Top Girls’

By Caryl Churchill

Directed by Zoe Freedman

Set in the early 1980s, ‘Top Girls’ is a dramatic and powerful piece of theatre. The play follows Marlene, new managing director of ‘Top Girls’ employment agency as she celebrates her promotion, goes to work and visits her estranged family.

Secrets are revealed, home truths told, and the position of women in society and the workplace examined.

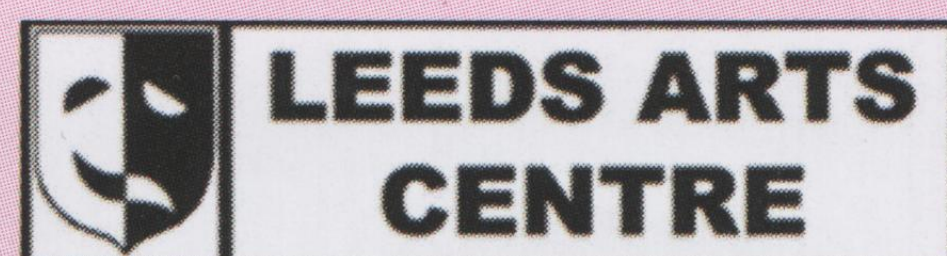

‘Top Girls’ is a classic of modern theatre with an all-female cast of strong and individual characters, it was described as ‘the best British play ever by a female dramatist’.

This play contains strong language and scenes some people may find upsetting.
