In a luxurious French apartment, two sisters serve their wealthy employer, Madame. When their Madame is away, the sisters play a dangerous game: taking turns pretending to be her. But this is no harmless roleplay—it's preparation for a murder, one they've never managed to quite carry out. The tension rises when their scheme to accuse Madame's lover of a crime begins to unravel, threatening to expose their darkest secrets. Inspired by a real-life murder case, Jean Genet's The Maids remains as shocking today as it was in 1947. This bold and thought-provoking play will stay with you long after the curtain falls.

*Join Leeds Arts Centre for their enthralling reimaging of The Maids by Jean Genet.*
